Mr. McCreary, of Kentucky, said that the message of the President sent to Congress on August 23, 1888, placed the Administration in a firm and courageous attitude on the fisheries controversy with Congress on the fisheries controversy with Congress on the fisheries controversy sidering a plan for an organized raid on with Great Britain. It was dignified, the reptile. resolute, and courageous, and presented a course of action for our Government a course of action for our Government which was worthy of the approval and support of the American people. While it might have caused some persons to saik, like Achilles, and others to indulge in abuse, the general sentiment was that the President should be upheld in his effort to maintain the honor of the country and the rights and dignity of her citizens. This message and the tariff message of President Cleveland should be recorded together in history. One sought recorded together in history. One sought to reduce the taxes and lighten the burden of the people and the other to main-tain the right and dignity of the Ameri-can citizen, and both would be rememcan catzen, and both would be remem-bered forever. Prompted by patriotic purposes and an carnest desire to settle all the disputed questions the President opened negotiations, and concluded a treaty with Great Britain and sub-mitted it to the United States Senate for ratification. That was a proper course—the course which intelligent and enlightened opinion sustained. If the Premdent had resorted to retaliatory measures without any attempt to make a treaty there were those who would have criticised and perhaps censured him. The treaty so carefully prepared by able and conscientious gentlemen was rejected The treaty so carefully prepared by able and conscientions gentlemen was rejected by the unanimous vote of the Republican senators without an effort to recast or amend it. in regard to the Canadian troubles would be deemed satisfactory by the Republican Senate; that the time for negotiation was over, and that the time for retaliation had come. There was nothing left for the President new but retaliation. At some length Mr. McCreary described the motive of the various treaties and told of the causes which had led to their negotiation and revocation. He also touched upon the outrages committed upon the American fishing vessels by the Canadian officials. The bill now under consideration enlarged the President's power of retaliation. It was a strong but appropriate measure. The existing law did not touch the transportation question, nor did it authoriza him to most the distance of the Richmond Dispatch.

Stoneous Reference Keeting — A St. Paul (Minn.) special says: William L. Hurley, a veteran of the late war, passed through Minneapolis yester-day, after having visited his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Hurley, who live on a farm about four miles from Ortonville. This was the first time in twenty-seven years that the son had seen his parents, and it was naturally an affecting meeting. The aged mother could hardly be convenient to the distance of nearly $50,000 for the month of August at the son whom she had supposed to be dead for a quarter of a century was still in the land of the living-the propriate measure. The existing law did not touch the transportation question, $14,488; marine barshop extension, $14,488; marine barshop extension which lasted until 2:45 o'clock, the Sender of Honse bill to prohibit Chinese immigration, and was addressed by Mr. Teller in support of the bill and defining the distinction between a violation of the treaty and abrogating it in the manner here proposed.

Mr. Teller mentioned the remarkable fact that the bill had been passed by the House without reference to a committee, and that it had been introduced not by a member of the Committee on Foreign Affairs, but by a man who in no sense and under no circumstances had the right to speak for American labor; and, as the Serator from South Carolina (Mr. Butler) had eady esserday with great frankness, the bill was a political movement. He did not find it is stated in the Record that the bill had been of rawn in the office of the Solicitor General, but he heard it so stated outside, and that it was sent down from the what it might, the President would be what it might, the President would be what it might, the President would be used to prohibit Chinese immigration, and was addressed by Mr. Teller in support of the bill and alto possible and the proposed in the case in the results of the constant of the case in the results of the case in the results
